WHEREAS, a very reliable economic survey was made for the Waterway Committee of Columbus, Ga., by former Chief of U. S. Army Engineers, William M. Black and his associates, Charles A. McKenney and John Stewart, and a very complete and exhaustive report made by them and delivered to the U. S. WHEREAS, such a canal will cut off approximately 500 miles of distance by the water route between New Orleans and the Gulf Ports, on the one hand, and New York and Liverpool, on the other, will eliminate the danger to shipping incident to passage through the Florida Straits, will bring about tremendous savings by reason of the resultant reduction in time, insurance and other transportation costs, and will constitute a valuable asset to our National Defense; and

WHEREAS, such a canal will largely solve the distribution problems of the Mississippi Valley and of the Southeast section of the United States; will greatly aid the agricultural and industrial activities in said section by furnishing them perpetual and cheap transportation to the Atlantic Seaboard where the best markets are located; will enhance the value of the farm lands through the producing of means for delivering their produce to market; and will offer material advantages and benefits to fully one-half of the producing area of the United States; and

WHEREAS, said ship canal, while rendering this valuable service to labor, industry, agriculture and ocean shipping, will at the same time, and without additional cost, provide a connection between the Atlantic Coastal Waterway and the Gulf Coastal Waterway for barges and small craft plying between Boston, Massachusetts, and Gulf of Mexico ports; and

WHEREAS, the Corps of Engineers of the Army of the United States, pursuant to authorization of Congress, is now completing an exhaustive physical survey of various possible routes for such a canal, and of the costs of the construction thereof; and

WHEREAS, an application is now pending with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of the United States for a loan of sufficient funds with which to construct said canal, such loan to be self-liquidating in character.
